Question Of The Week

March 20, 2019

Dear Valued Customer,

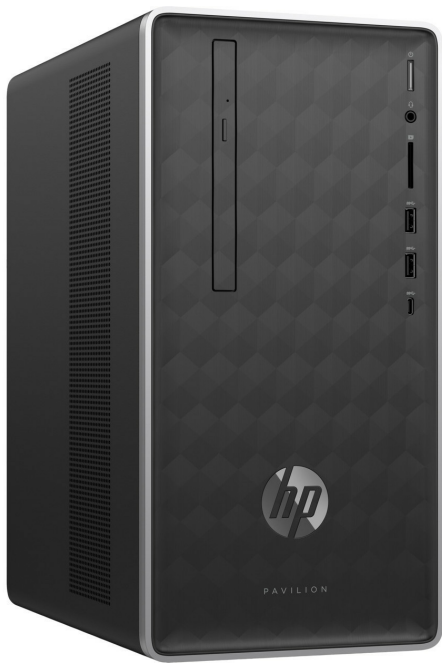

Welcome back to our Question of the Week email. This week, we're going to explain the answers to last week's quiz. If you didn't have a chance to take it, there's a link for you to do that, too.

From time to time, I offer computer specials here in the QOTW email. I have one today. It's for a desktop and it's a very good buy; however, my distributor only has a few in stock. My guess is that this special won't last more than a day or two. Notice it has 12 GB of RAM and an Intel i7 processor. Get all the details in the next section. If you're interested, please call as soon as possible. (772-408-4425)

REMINDER: Microsoft and/or Apple will NEVER call you out of the blue, they will NEVER cause a window to appear on your device warning you that it's infected and that you should not turn it off or you'll lose everything. These are SCAMS.

Have a great rest of the week.

John

Question of the Week

Question: "I didn't understand how I missed some of the correct answers in the quiz you gave us last week. Can you explain the answers?"

Answer:
A ton of people took the quiz last week and I loved seeing the results. A few of you cheated and didn't put in your name and email address!

Most of you, if you were tripped up at all, had difficulty answering some of the questions which had multiple answers. One answer that disturbed me a bit was that a few people said it's okay to open an attachment from people you know. That's not necessarily true and you have to be careful.

All of the questions in this quiz were based on blog posts I had done up until our last seminar.

I'm going to run this reminder one more time because of the importance of having surge protection for your laptop, smartphone and/or tablet. If you need a portable surge protector - something you can easily take with you and use when you're in an airport or a coffee shop, etc., then click on the image below. We'll make two bits if you buy and you'll get a device you really should have.
